There are five scatter files for 5.1 Lollipop devices, 5.0 Lollipop devices, and 4.4 KitKat devices.This invention relates to a method of forming ceramic bodies, and particularly to a method of forming ceramic bodies having a texture or appearance of an extruded material. The use of additives to form ceramic materials into shaped articles such as honeycombs, monoliths, strands, sheets, and rods, is known in the art. These additives may be incorporated into the ceramic material to impart color, improve texture, and/or strengthen the ceramic material. U.S. Pat. No. 4,851,385 (Corr et al.) discloses the use of colloidal silica as a filler in a ceramic slurry to impart a texture to the ceramic. In the past, ceramic bodies were manufactured from a ceramic slurry. In one method, a ceramic slurry was extruded as a continuous rod, and the rod was then cut into pieces having a desired shape. In another method, ceramic pieces were cut from a ceramic slab, which was formed into a desired shape. In still another method, ceramic bodies were formed by pressing ceramic pieces between an upper and a lower die member, and heating the upper and lower die members and the pieces at a temperature sufficient to melt the pieces, but below the melting temperature of the die members. The upper and lower die members were pressed together, and the ceramic pieces were then
